

145 A.D.3d 1367
Supreme Court, Appellate Division,
Third Department, New York.

Robert R. SPROLE III, Respondent,

v.

Linda S. SPROLE, Appellant.

Dec. 29, 2016.

Synopsis

Background: Husband commenced divorce proceeding against wife. The Supreme Court, Tompkins County, Ames, J., ordered equitable distribution of the parties' marital property and awarded wife spousal maintenance and child support. Wife appealed.

Holdings: The Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Peters, P.J., held that:

[1] trial court did not abuse its discretion by awarding wife $96,000 in annual spousal maintenance for five-year period;

[2] trial court did not abuse its discretion in determining that awarding child support to wife on amount of income over the statutory cap was not warranted;

[3] trial court erred in crediting husband for temporary child support payments he made in excess of what he was required to pay under final award;

[4] trial court did not err by directing that the marital residence be sold;

[5] credit card debt was subject to equitable distribution; and

[6] trial court providently exercised its discretion by limiting husband's contribution towards wife's attorney fees to $200,000.

Affirmed as modified.

West Headnotes (14)

[1] Divorce

🔑 Multiple factors

Divorce

🔑 Extent of Time of Payments

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by awarding wife $96,000 in annual spousal maintenance for five-year period; while husband's salary was $415,000 and wife had left the work force to care for the parties' children, wife was relatively young, in good health, and had a Bachelor's degree, and wife stood to receive substantial sums from the equitable distribution award. McKinney's DRL § 236\(B\)\(6\)\(2009\).

1 Cases that cite this headnote

[2] Divorce

🔑 Discretion as to amount

Divorce

🔑 Extent of Time of Payments

Divorce

🔑 Spousal Support

The amount and duration of a maintenance award are addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be disturbed provided that the statutory factors and the parties' predivorce standard of living are considered. McKinney's DRL § 236\(B\)\(6\)\(2009\).

3 Cases that cite this headnote

[3] Divorce

🔑 Grounds and Defenses in Determining Existence and Amount of Obligation

Divorce

🔑 Determination and Findings

Trial court must set forth a reasoned analysis of the statutory factors it relies upon in fashioning spousal maintenance award, but it is not required to analyze and apply every factor set forth in the statute. McKinney's DRL § 236\(B\)\(6\)\(2009\).

2 Cases that cite this headnote

[4] Child Support

🔑 Incomes outside guidelines range

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in determining that awarding child support to mother, who was awarded sole physical custody of older daughter in divorce proceeding, on the amount of income over the statutory cap was not warranted, given that fact that father was paying all of the expenses of younger daughter in his custody, older daughter was enrolled in college and had access to college savings account, and father had agreed to pay remaining costs associated with daughters' education and medical care. McKinney's DRL §§ 240\(1-b\)\(b\)\(3\), 240\(1-b\)\(c\)\(3\), 240\(1-b\)\(f\).

Cases that cite this headnote

[5] Child Support

🔑 Credits and offsets in general

Trial court erred in crediting husband for temporary child support payments that he made during pendency of divorce proceeding in excess of what he was required to pay under final child support award, given the absence of statutory authority for recoupment of overpayments of child support and strong public policy against restitution or recoupment of such overpayments. McKinney's DRL § 236\(B\)\(6\)–\(7\)\(2009\).

Cases that cite this headnote

[6] Child Support

🔑 Time of taking effect in general

Child Support

🔑 Credits and offsets in general

Divorce

🔑 Credits and offsets

Divorce

🔑 Commencement of obligation to pay

An award of maintenance and child support is effective as of the date of the application therefor, and retroactive amounts of maintenance and support shall be paid, as the court directs, taking into account any amount of temporary maintenance or child support which has been paid. McKinney's DRL § 236\(B\)\(6\)–\(7\)\(2009\).

Cases that cite this headnote

[7] Divorce

🔑 Notes and payment over time;interest

Trial court, which awarded wife 30% of the value of husband's interest in business in divorce proceeding, did not abuse its discretion by ordering that sum to be paid in yearly installments without interest, given the amount of the award, the nonliquidity of husband's interest, and the fact that the money was free of tax consequences to the wife.

Cases that cite this headnote

[8] Divorce

🔑 Methods of Distribution

The manner in which a distributive award is to be paid is discretionary.

Cases that cite this headnote

[9] Divorce

🔑 Sale and division of proceeds

Trial court did not err in divorce proceeding by directing that the marital residence be sold, with the net proceeds therefrom to be divided equally between the parties, since older daughter in mother's physical custody was enrolled in college, father had physical custody of younger daughter, and there was no proof that wife could afford to maintain the residence if awarded exclusive use and possession.

Cases that cite this headnote

[10] Divorce

🔑 Separate or marital character

Credit card debt, which accrued during the marriage, was not incurred for husband's exclusive benefit or in pursuit of his separate interests, and thus was subject to equitable distribution in divorce proceeding. McKinney's DRL § 236\(B\)\(1\)\(c\).

Cases that cite this headnote

[11] Divorce

🔑 Vehicles, vessels, and other forms of transport

Wife's vehicle was marital property subject to equitable distribution in divorce proceeding, where it was acquired during the marriage and was listed as marital asset in her statement of proposed disposition. McKinney's DRL § 236\(B\)\(1\)\(c\).

Cases that cite this headnote

[12] Divorce

🔑 Vehicles, vessels, and other forms of transport

Husband's boat was not marital property and thus was not subject to equitable distribution in divorce proceeding, where it was acquired subsequent to the commencement of divorce proceeding. McKinney's DRL § 236\(B\)\(1\)\(c\).

Cases that cite this headnote

[13] Divorce

🔑 Personal and household goods

Value of furnishings removed from marital residence by husband following separation from wife was to be divided equally in divorce proceeding. McKinney's DRL § 236\(B\)\(1\)\(c\).

Cases that cite this headnote

[14] Divorce

🔑 Grounds and Considerations for Award or Amount in General

Divorce

🔑 Financial condition and resources in general

Trial court providently exercised its discretion in divorce proceeding by limiting husband's contribution towards wife's attorney fees to $200,000, given the financial circumstances of both parties together with all the other circumstances of the case. McKinney's DRL § 237\(a\).

Cases that cite this headnote

Attorneys and Law Firms

**235 Linda S. Sprole, Ithaca, appellant pro se.

D.J. & J.A. Cirando, Syracuse (John A. Cirando of counsel), for respondent.

Before: PETERS, P.J., McCARTHY, EGAN JR., LYNCH and DEVINE, JJ.

Opinion

PETERS, P.J.

*1367 Appeal from a judgment of the Supreme Court (Ames, J.), entered September 22, 2015 in Tompkins County, ordering, among other things, equitable distribution of the parties' marital property, upon a decision of the court.

Plaintiff (hereinafter the husband) and defendant (hereinafter the wife) were married in 1994 and have two daughters (born in 1996 and 2005). In 2009, the husband moved out of the marital home and commenced this action for divorce. The parties stipulated to the ground for divorce and, in March 2013, an order was entered awarding the parties joint legal custody of the older daughter, with physical custody to the mother, and granting sole legal and physical custody of the younger *1368 daughter to the father. Following a nonjury trial on the remaining issues that divided the parties, Supreme Court issued a judgment of divorce which, among other things, awarded maintenance to the wife in the amount of $8,000 per month for five years, set the husband's monthly child support obligation at $1,997.50, distributed the marital assets and directed the husband to pay $200,000 of the wife's counsel fees. Overall, the parties' marital assets were distributed equally, with the exception of the husband's interest in the closely held company for which he served as the chief executive officer, of which the wife was awarded 30% of the stipulated value to be paid in five annual installments of $60,000 with a balloon payment of $600,000 in the sixth year. The judgment also directed that the marital home be listed for immediate sale, with the net proceeds therefrom to be divided equally between the parties. The wife appeals.

**236 [1] [2] [3] We first address the wife's challenge to the award of spousal maintenance. “The amount and duration of a maintenance award are addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and will not be disturbed provided that the statutory factors and the parties' predivorce standard of living are considered” (Robinson v. Robinson, 133 A.D.3d 1185, 1186, 21 N.Y.S.3d 392 [2015] [internal quotation marks and citations omitted]; see Domestic Relations Law § 236[B] [former (6)]; Cervoni v. Cervoni, 141 A.D.3d 918, 919, 34 N.Y.S.3d 792 [2016]). The court must set forth a reasoned analysis of the factors it relies upon in fashioning the award, “but it ‘is not required to analyze and apply every factor set forth in [the statute]’” (Curley v. Curley, 125 A.D.3d 1227, 1228, 4 N.Y.S.3d 676 [2015], quoting McAteer v. McAteer, 294 A.D.2d 783, 784, 742 N.Y.S.2d 718 [2002]; see Robinson v. Robinson, 133 A.D.3d at 1186, 21 N.Y.S.3d 392).

Here, Supreme Court fully acknowledged the significant disparity in the parties' income, noting that the husband was earning an annual salary of approximately $415,000 at the time of trial while the wife, having left the workforce in 1996 following the birth of the parties' older child, had no income. The court also recognized, however, that the wife was relatively young, in good health, has a Bachelor's degree and could return to full-time employment given that the child in her custody was 18 years old and attending college, yet she had made no effort to secure employment throughout the six-year period during which this divorce action was pending. Moreover, the husband had been paying the mortgage and carrying costs on the marital residence—which the wife was occupying—during the pendency of this action, and the wife stands to receive substantial sums from the equitable distribution award, including *1369 roughly $200,000 from the sale of the marital residence, $900,000 for her share in the husband's business and nearly $140,000 for her portion of the remaining marital assets. Given Supreme Court's consideration of the relevant factors and mindful that the primary purpose of maintenance “is to encourage rehabilitation and self-sufficiency to the extent possible, while still accounting for a large discrepancy in earning power between the parties” (Quinn v. Quinn, 61 A.D.3d 1067, 1071, 876 N.Y.S.2d 720 [2009] [internal quotation marks and citations omitted]; accord Schwab v. Schwab, 50 A.D.3d 1206, 1210, 854 N.Y.S.2d 802 [2008]), we perceive no abuse of discretion in the court's award of $96,000 in annual maintenance for a five-year period (see Macaluso v. Macaluso, 145 A.D.3d 1295, 1296, 43 N.Y.S.3d 599 [2016]; Doscher v. Doscher, 137 A.D.3d 962, 963–964, 27 N.Y.S.3d 231 [2016], lv. denied 27 N.Y.S.3d 912, 2016 WL 4533153 [2016]; Musacchio v. Musacchio, 107 A.D.3d 1326, 1331, 968 N.Y.S.2d 664 [2013]; Quinn v. Quinn, 61 A.D.3d at 1071, 876 N.Y.S.2d 720; Milnarik v. Milnarik, 23 A.D.3d 960, 962, 805 N.Y.S.2d 151 [2005]).

[4] Next, we find no error in Supreme Court's calculation of the husband's child support obligation. The court applied the statutory percentage for one child (the older daughter in the wife's custody) to the first $141,000 of combined parental income, 100% of which was attributable to the husband, resulting in a monthly obligation of $1,997.50. Because the combined parental income of $415,000 exceeded the then-applicable statutory cap, Supreme Court was required to determine what amount, if any, of that excess income would be designated as part of the child support obligation by considering the statutory percentage and/or the factors set forth in Domestic Relations Law § 240(1–b)(f) (see Domestic Relations Law § 240[1–b][b][3]; [c][3]; [f]; **237 Holterman v. Holterman, 3 N.Y.3d 1, 10–12, 781 N.Y.S.2d 458, 814 N.E.2d 765 [2004]; Vantine v. Vantine, 125 A.D.3d 1259, 1262, 4 N.Y.S.3d 375 [2015]; Sadaghiani v. Ghayoori, 97 A.D.3d 1013, 1013–1014, 948 N.Y.S.2d 566 [2012]; Smith v. Smith, 1 A.D.3d 870, 872, 769 N.Y.S.2d 306 [2003]). Supreme Court listed several factors it considered before finding that none of the combined income over the statutory cap should be considered in calculating the husband's child support obligation with respect to the older daughter, including, most notably, that the husband is paying all of the expenses of the younger daughter in his custody, having waived child support from the wife for this child. Also bearing on the court's determination was the fact that the older child was enrolled in college and had access to a college savings account containing nearly $85,000, and that the husband had agreed to pay any remaining costs associated with the children's attendance at a four-year university and remained responsible for 100% of the children's insurance coverage as well as any outstanding medical, dental and optical *1370 expenses. Considering all of the facts and circumstances, including the substantial assets available to the wife through the distributive award (see Holterman v. Holterman, 3 N.Y.3d at 14, 781 N.Y.S.2d 458, 814 N.E.2d 765; Carman v. Carman, 22 A.D.3d 1004, 1006, 802 N.Y.S.2d 558 [2005] ), we cannot say that Supreme Court abused its considerable discretion in determining that an award of child support on the amount of income over the statutory cap was not warranted (see Weitzner v. Weitzner, 120 A.D.3d 1406, 1407–1408, 992 N.Y.S.2d 576 [2014]; Betro v. Carbone, 24 A.D.3d 1322, 1323–1324, 807 N.Y.S.2d 507 [2005]; compare Hymowitz v. Hymowitz, 119 A.D.3d 736, 743, 991 N.Y.S.2d 57 [2014] ).

[5] [6] The wife further challenges Supreme Court's decision to give the husband credits representing the amount of the pendente lite maintenance and child support payments he made. Pursuant to Domestic Relations Law § 236(B) (former [6] ) (a) and (7)(a), in effect at the time of the commencement of the action, an award of maintenance and child support is effective as of the date of the application therefor, and retroactive amounts of maintenance and support shall be paid, as the court directs, “taking into account any amount of temporary maintenance [or child support] which has been paid” (see Burns v. Burns, 84 N.Y.2d 369, 377, 618 N.Y.S.2d 761, 643 N.E.2d 80 [1994]; McKay v. Groesbeck, 117 A.D.3d 810, 811, 985 N.Y.S.2d 686 [2014]; Verdrager v. Verdrager, 230 A.D.2d 786, 788, 646 N.Y.S.2d 185 [1996] ). “These provisions require a court to provide for retroactive payments of permanent maintenance and support only where the award is in excess of any temporary maintenance and support award, however, and do not require the granting of credits for past overpayments of temporary maintenance and support” (Foxx v. Foxx, 114 A.D.2d 605, 607, 494 N.Y.S.2d 446 [1985] [citations omitted]; see Vicinanza v. Vicinanza, 210 A.D.2d 863, 864, 620 N.Y.S.2d 607 [1994]; Rodgers v. Rodgers, 98 A.D.2d 386, 389–390, 470 N.Y.S.2d 401 [1983], appeal dismissed 62 N.Y.2d 646 [1984] ).

Here, the permanent order of maintenance retroactively set a higher rate than that paid by the husband during the pendency of the action, thereby creating an immediate arrearage and entitling him to a credit for such past payments (see Foxx v. Foxx, 114 A.D.2d at 607, 494 N.Y.S.2d 446). With respect to child support, however, the converse is true; the temporary support payments already made by the husband pursuant to the **238 pendente lite order exceeded the retroactive support obligation set forth by Supreme Court. Absent any statutory authority for recoupment of overpayments of child support and given the “ ‘strong public policy against restitution or recoupment of [such] overpayments’ ” (Johnson v. Chapin, 12 N.Y.3d 461, 466, 881 N.Y.S.2d 373, 909 N.E.2d 66 [2009], quoting *1371 Baraby v. Baraby, 250 A.D.2d 201, 205, 681 N.Y.S.2d 826 [1998]; see Matter of Apjohn v. Lubinski, 114 A.D.3d 1061, 1064, 981 N.Y.S.2d 166 [2014], lv. denied 23 N.Y.3d 902, 2014 WL 1810155 [2014] ), we conclude that Supreme Court erred in crediting the husband for the temporary child support payments that he made in excess of what he was required to pay under the final child support award (see Baraby v. Baraby, 250 A.D.2d at 205, 681 N.Y.S.2d 826; Stempler v. Stempler, 143 A.D.2d 410, 413, 532 N.Y.S.2d 550 [1988], lv. dismissed 74 N.Y.2d 715, 543 N.Y.S.2d 400, 541 N.E.2d 429 [1989], lv. denied 75 N.Y.2d 709, 555 N.Y.S.2d 692, 554 N.E.2d 1280 [1990] ).

[7] [8] As to the equitable distribution award, while the wife does not take issue with Supreme Court's decision to distribute 30% of the value of the husband's interest in the business, she claims that the court improvidently exercised its discretion by ordering that sum to be paid in yearly installments without interest. It is settled that “the manner in which a distributive award is to be paid is discretionary” (Smith v. Smith, 17 A.D.3d 959, 960, 794 N.Y.S.2d 468 [2005]; accord Mairs v. Mairs, 61 A.D.3d 1204, 1208, 878 N.Y.S.2d 222 [2009]; see Unger–Matusik v. Matusik, 276 A.D.2d 936, 938, 715 N.Y.S.2d 449 [2000] ). Considering the amount of the award and the nonliquidity of the husband's interest, and recognizing that the $900,000 is free of tax consequences to the wife, we find that permitting the husband to pay the wife over a six-year period without interest was an appropriate exercise of the court's discretion (see Dewitt v. Sheiness, 42 A.D.3d 776, 778, 840 N.Y.S.2d 208 [2007]; Basile v. Basile, 199 A.D.2d 649, 652, 605 N.Y.S.2d 133 [1993] ).

[9] We now turn to Supreme Court's order concerning the sale of the marital residence. In light of the custodial status and age of the children, as well as the absence of any proof that the wife could afford to maintain the marital residence if awarded exclusive use and possession, it was not inappropriate for Supreme Court to direct that it be sold (see Bernard v. Bernard, 126 A.D.3d

658, 659, 5 N.Y.S.3d 233 [2015]; Carney v. Carney, 202 A.D.2d 907, 910, 609 N.Y.S.2d 425 [1994]; Church v. Church, 169 A.D.2d 851, 853, 564 N.Y.S.2d 572 [1991]; Tanner v. Tanner, 107 A.D.2d 980, 982, 484 N.Y.S.2d 700 [1985] ). While Supreme Court's decision declined to permit the wife a “buy-back option” in an amount less than the appraised value of the marital residence, nothing in the decision or judgment of divorce precludes her from purchasing the husband's interest in the home or making an offer to purchase the home for an amount less than the listing price. Nor can we conclude, under the particular circumstances presented herein, that Supreme Court abused its discretion in ordering that the home be sold at a public auction in the event that it remained on the market for *1372 six months (see Domestic Relations Law § 234; Hickland v. Hickland, 79 A.D.2d 736, 736–737, 434 N.Y.S.2d 757 [1980] ).<sup>1</sup>

**239 [10] [11] [12] Briefly addressing the parties' credit card debt, inasmuch as the wife represented to Supreme Court in her statement of proposed disposition that such debt was a marital liability, she cannot now be heard to complain that the court erred in treating it as such (see Robinson v. Robinson, 133 A.D.3d at 1190, 21 N.Y.S.3d 392). In any event, the record reflects that the debt, which accrued during the marriage, was not incurred for the husband's exclusive benefit or in pursuit of his separate interests (see Funaro v. Funaro, 141 A.D.3d 893, 897, 34 N.Y.S.3d 757 [2016]; Wagner v. Wagner, 136 A.D.3d 1335, 1336, 25 N.Y.S.3d 471 [2016]; McKeever v. McKeever, 8 A.D.3d 702, 702–703, 777 N.Y.S.2d 781 [2004] ). The wife's vehicle, acquired during the marriage and listed as a marital asset in her statement of proposed disposition, likewise constituted marital property subject to equitable distribution (see Domestic Relations Law § 236[B][1] [c]; Robinson v. Robinson, 133 A.D.3d at 1190, 21 N.Y.S.3d 392). The husband's boat, on the other hand, was his separate property inasmuch as it was acquired subsequent to the commencement of this action.

[13] As for the parties' furnishings, Supreme Court ordered that those located at the marital residence be divided equally between the parties, but failed to account for certain items of property that were removed from the marital residence by the husband following the parties' separation. The value of such furnishings, like those located at the marital residence, should be divided equally amongst the parties.

Supreme Court directed that any balance remaining in the children's college savings accounts when they attain the age of 30 revert to the parties themselves, despite the parties' stipulation at trial that any such balance would be divided equally between the children. Inasmuch as Supreme Court provided no reason for its decision to deviate from the parties' stipulated disposition, and both the husband and the wife agree that the court should not have done so, we will modify the judgment accordingly.

[14] Finally, considering “the financial circumstances of both parties together with all the other circumstances of the case” (Johnson v. Chapin, 12 N.Y.3d at 467, 881 N.Y.S.2d 373, 909 N.E.2d 66 [internal quotation marks and citations omitted]; see Domestic Relations Law § 237[a] ), we find that Supreme Court providently exercised its discretion in limiting the husband's contribution towards the wife's counsel fees to $200,000 (see *1373 Murphy v. Murphy, 125 A.D.3d 1265, 1267, 4 N.Y.S.3d 661 [2015]; Ansour v. Ansour, 61 A.D.3d 536, 537, 878 N.Y.S.2d 17 [2009]; Matter of Yarinsky v. Yarinsky, 36 A.D.3d 1135, 1141, 829 N.Y.S.2d 710 [2007] ).

The wife's remaining contentions are either not properly before us or have been examined and found to be without merit.

ORDERED that the judgment is modified, on the law, without costs, by reversing so much thereof as (1) awarded plaintiff a credit for child support overpayments and (2) directed that any balance remaining in the children's college savings accounts, when the children attain the age of 30, be divided equally between plaintiff and defendant; award defendant a refund of $53,495 in child support, resulting in an increase of her distributive award payable upon the sale of the marital residence, direct that any balance remaining in the children's college savings accounts, when the children attain the age of 30, be divided equally between the children, direct that any furnishings removed from the marital residence by plaintiff be divided equally between plaintiff and defendant and matter remitted to the Supreme Court **240 for further proceedings not inconsistent with this Court's decision; and, as so modified, affirmed.

McCARTHY, EGAN JR., LYNCH and DEVINE, JJ., concur.

All Citations

145 A.D.3d 1367, 45 N.Y.S.3d 233, 2016 N.Y. Slip Op.
08911

Footnotes

- 1 We similarly note that Supreme Court's decision and judgment in no way prohibit the wife—or the husband—from ultimately purchasing the home in the event that it is put up for sale at public auction.